

I have been very happy with the Indiana No-Call law. It has virtually eliminated unwanted invasions of my privacy. I also believe that when a state has passed a law that serves its citizen's well, the Federal Government should not weaken that law unless it is a clear violation of civil rights. Prohibiting assorted sales people from calling me at home without my express permission is not a breach of freedom of speech. Please do not meddle with the Indiana no-call statute or implement rules which would weaken it.
